Course Description

This course explores the relationship between the learning of the English language and the learning of school contents through English in order to maximize learning in the classroom for students who are described as English Language Learners (ELLs). The diversity in Ontario's classrooms, arising from the circulation of people within and into Canada, requires every teacher to be equipped with adequate knowledge of the policy and program implementation in supporting the fast-growing student population of English Language Learners - both Canadian-born and newcomers from other countries, including international students. This course is therefore designed to prepare teachers to develop the knowledge, skills, and attitude to support this category of learners across subjects and educational and cultural backgrounds.

Welcome and Course Expectations

Hello!

My name is Paul Akpomuje, a PhD student in the Faculty of Education, at Queen's University, and I will be the instructor for this course. Working with me as a Teaching Assistant is Han Xu, also a PhD student in the Faculty of Education. I taught at a university in Nigeria between 2015 and 2022, and I was also an exchange scholar in Germany in 2017. My PhD research explores the experiences of international students in Ontario higher education, and the implications on their identities. I am excited that I will be teaching this course and more excited to partner with each one of you to make the experience of learning together worthwhile.

This is an in-person course that builds activities into each class such that candidates are assigned group tasks during class time. I am considering the possibility of making our time together each day (from Monday to Friday) filled with activities that will be interactive and participatory. I am hopeful that we will each play our different roles as instructor and students to achieve this goal. I understand that these are your final weeks in the B.Ed. program, and I am happy to work with you all to make these last few weeks count.

In the first two weeks of the course, I will facilitate topics in the course outline, while you will all be expected to participate in the teaching and learning. In the third week, you will work in groups to facilitate topics that you will introduce, develop, and share with the entire class. While a group facilitates a lesson, the rest of the class will be expected to ask questions and contribute meaningfully. We will also have a guest instructor who will share the wealth of their knowledge with us. There are other couple of tasks (nothing overwhelming) that you will complete as coursework.

Welcome onboard!

Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs)

We have set out some outcomes we expect to see achieved at the end of this course and they are listed as follows.

1. Define the scope and geographies of ELLs to uncover the complexities that characterize this student group.
2. Incorporate ELLs' different educational contexts in teaching for culturally responsive practice.
3. Engage ELLs in meaningful learning by leveraging teachable moments that center their lived experiences.
4. Develop the skills (e.g., multiliteracies/multimodal, critical literacy) to best support ELLs through differentiation of individual learning.
5. Implement the gradual release of responsibility (GRR) strategy to form partnership with learners for enriched learning experience and academic success.
6. Create multimodal resources to effectively respond to ELLs' different learning needs and approaches.

Assessment Overview

A variety of tasks (as show in Table below) will be used for assessment in this course to ensure that the learning outcomes are achieved.

Alignment with CLOs	Tasks	Descriptions	Weighting	Due
1, 2, 3,	Group Work Report	This will be one final report that each student will submit in view of their collaboration/teamwork in the course, highlighting the individual contributions, roles, challenges, growth they experienced, how they supported each other in learning, and how these can translate as they move into their teaching positions. The goal of the report is to provide students with an opportunity to reflect on their collaborations with peers due to the interactive nature of the course. This is also a good opportunity to highlight individual contributions, growth, and development throughout the course.	20%	July 22
2, 3	Group Debate	Students will be split into six groups and will engage in debates about certain topics with each group supporting a different opinion. Please ensure that each group member plays a specific role such as 1) key speakers who will represent the entire group, 2) researchers who will select the topics in agreement with the whole group, and 3) organizers, who will structure the points for debate and also organize other in-group activities. The goals of the debate will be to a) increase understanding about the topic in question, and b) familiarize teacher candidates with debating skills that they can then adopt to support ELLs towards building confidence and proficiency in speaking.	15%	July 10

1, 2, 3	Focus Group	Students will engage in a focus group with ELLs at the School of English to develop baseline understanding of this group of learners. The class will be divided into six different groups and each group will be assigned 2-3 students from the School of English whom they will schedule appointments with to have the focus group discussion. Each group will submit a concise but rich analysis of the findings from their focus group by the due date. The instructor will share templates of the questions and analysis of the data with each group. Each group will be expected to adapt and modify the template as necessary. The goal of this task is to ensure that teacher candidates have first-hand experience working with ELLs as they apply some of the experiences they will have gained from the course.	25%	July 19
1-6	Peer Teaching	In the same six groups created for focus group and debate, two groups will facilitate one topic each from Wednesday to Friday of week three. The first two days of that week (Monday and Tuesday) will be used for in-class preparation. The researching, selection, and development of topics will be through a self-directed learning approach that will place the group in full control, with necessary guidance from the instructor. Each group will discuss their chosen topic with instructor in the second week and after ratification of the topic, they	20%	3rd Week in Class

		will prepare to teach the whole class in the third week. Instructor will share a list of ELL-related topics as reference with the groups from which they will pick. Groups will be required to use only peer-reviewed journal articles and will share with the class via onQ. Other members of the class will be expected to read the articles and prepare questions or comments to engage with the group that will present on each day. The goal of this task is to help teacher candidates build self-directed learning skills that will be valuable in their careers as teachers and help them become resourceful as they support ELLs to learn.
4, 6	Project	Teacher candidates will create an exemplar of how they would teach any topic of their choice from their different teaching subjects through a multimodal approach that is accessible to ELLs (e.g., poetry, poster, video games, video, art, blog, vlog, etc.). They will post their creations on onQ and will also attach a short description of their creations alongside their submissions. The goal of this project is to improve the teaching capacity of teacher candidates as they source instructional aids/materials that can help ELLs to learn in more accessible ways.	20%	July 28
Total Score 100%

University Policies

Academic Integrity

All breaches of academic integrity are considered serious offences within the University community and a student who commits such an offence runs the risk of a range of sanctions including a failure in the course or a requirement to withdraw from the University. Departure from academic integrity includes plagiarism which means presenting work done (in whole or in part) by someone else as if it were one's own. For complete details, please see (<http://educ.queensu.ca/regulations-policies>).

Queen's Student Academic Success Services (SASS) offers a self-directed, online academic integrity module which we encourage all students to take which will help with:

- Understanding the nature of the academic integrity departure
- Understanding the expectations of and role of sources in scholarly writing
- Integrating sources into your writing (paraphrasing, quoting, summarizing)
- Understanding when and how to cite your sources
- Managing your time effectively to avoid the need for shortcuts
- Taking effective notes to ensure accuracy of source material and correct attribution

Attendance, Course Work and Conduct

(<http://educ.queensu.ca/regulations-policies>)

Students must be registered in a course(s) to be eligible to attend or otherwise participate in lectures, tutorials, assignments, tests, and examinations associated with the course(s). Students are expected to be and, at the discretion of the instructor, may be required to be present at all lectures, tutorials, tests, and examinations in their courses and to submit assignments at the prescribed times. Student conduct in lectures, laboratories, tutorials, tests and examinations must conform to the University's Code of Conduct.

A student who claims illness or compassionate grounds as reason for missing lectures, tutorials, assignments, tests, or examinations is responsible for making alternative arrangements with the instructors concerned. In most cases, this should not require medical or other documentation. If there is a significant effect on attendance or academic performance the student must provide documentation with any request for accommodation and appeal directly to the instructor in a timely manner.

At the discretion of the instructor, an assigned alternate learning activity may be expected to be completed within a mutually convenient time frame if a class is missed.

It is a matter of your professional responsibility to be prepared for class and be on time.

Academic Accommodations and Extenuating Circumstance

Queen's University is committed to achieving full accessibility for people with disabilities. Part of this commitment includes arranging academic accommodations for students with disabilities to ensure they have an equitable opportunity to participate in all of their academic activities. If you are a student with a disability and think you may need accommodations, you are strongly encouraged to contact the Queen's Student Accessibility Services (QSAS) and register as early as possible. For more information, including important deadlines, please visit the QSAS website at: <http://www.queensu.ca/studentwellness/accessibility-services>.

If you have accommodations that have been approved through the QSAS, please advise your instructors as soon as possible so that your accommodations are implemented. It is advised that you also contact the Associate Dean, Teacher Education when you have received your accommodation letter from QSAS.
